13 No. CR-13-24-FVS

14 ORDER DENYING DEFENDANTS' MOTION TO DISMISS THE 15 INDICTMENT UNDER THE TENTH AMENDMENT

16

17 THE DEFENDANTS have filed a number of motions. The Court 18 considered their motions at a pretrial conference that was held on 19 April 22 and 23, 2014. This order addresses the defendants' motion to 20 dismiss the Indictment under the Tenth Amendment.

21

22 BACKGROUND

23 In 1971, the State of Washington adopted the Uniform Controlled
24 Substances Act, chapter 69.50 RCW. State v. Reis, No. 69911-3-I, 2014
25 WL 1284863, at *2 (March 31, 2014). Since then, marijuana has been a 26 Schedule I controlled substance as a matter of state law. Reis, 2014 WL 1284863, at *2 (citing RCW 69.50.204(c)(22)). In 1998, the citizens of the state adopted the Washington State Medical Use of Cannabis Act ("MUCA"), chapter RCW 69.51A, through the initiative process. Reis, 2014 WL 1284863, at *2. As Division I of the Washington Court of Appeals explained in Reis, the purpose of the MUCA

1 "was to allow certain individuals suffering from terminal or 2 debilitating medical conditions to use marijuana medicinally." 2014
3 WL 1284863, at *2 (citing RCW 69.51A.005). In 2011, the Washington
4 legislature passed amendments to the MUCA. Id. at *3. However, the 5 governor vetoed a number of provisions. Id. at *4. The Supreme Court 6 of the State of Washington has not interpreted the MUCA in light of 7 the governor's veto. Thus, it is not entirely clear to what extent
8 the MUCA limits prosecutions under the state Controlled Substances 9 Act.

10 On August 9, 2012, law enforcement officers executed a warrant 11 that had been issued by a state judicial officer authorizing them to 12 search 939 Clugston-Onion Creek Road, Colville, WA. A federal agent
13 participated in the search. The officers observed approximately 70
14 growing marijuana plants. According to the defendants, the persons 15 who were growing the plants were attempting to comply with the state
16 MUCA. The officers seized some of the marijuana plants they observed 17 on August 9th, but they left many of the plants just as they found 18 them. On August 16, 2012, federal agents executed a warrant that had 19 been issued by a federal judicial officer authorizing them to search 20 the same property. They seized all of the marijuana plants they 21 observed.

22 On February 6, 2013, a federal grand jury returned an indictment 23 charging the defendants with violations of federal law. The 24 defendants move to dismiss the indictment. They claim the instant
25 prosecution violates the Tenth Amendment. For one thing, they argue 26 the prosecution is a federal attempt to coerce state authorities into

1 enforcing the federal Controlled Substances Act ("CSA"), 21 U.S.C. §
2 801 et seq. For another thing, they argue the prosecution is a
3 federal attempt to discourage the State of Washington from legalizing 4 the possession of marijuana for medical purposes.

5 RULING

6 The Tenth Amendment states, "The powers not delegated to the 7 United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, 8 are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." U.S.
9 Const. amend. X. "The Supreme Court has read this Amendment as a 10 'tautology': 'If a power is delegated to Congress in the 11 Constitution, the Tenth Amendment expressly disclaims any reservation 12 of that power to the States.'" Gila River Indian Community v. United 13 States, 729 F.3d 1139, 1153 (9th Cir. 2013) (quoting New York v.
14 United States, 505 U.S. 144, 156-57, 112 S.Ct. 2408, 120 L.Ed.2d 120
15 (1992)). However, "even where Congress has the authority under the 16 Constitution to pass laws requiring or prohibiting certain acts, it 17 lacks the power directly to compel the States to require or prohibit 18 those acts." New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144, 166, 112 S.Ct.
19 2408, 120 L.Ed.2d 120 (1992). For example, Congress may not command
20 state officers to administer federal regulatory programs. Raich v.
21 Gonzales, 500 F.3d 850, 867 n.17 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing Printz v.
22 United States, 521 U.S. 898, 935, 117 S.Ct. 2365, 138 L.Ed.2d 914
23 (1997), and New York v. United States, 505 U.S. 144, 166, 112 S.Ct.
24 2408, 120 L.Ed.2d 120 (1992)). Nor may Congress compel states to 25 adopt specific legislation. Id. The defendants argue the instant
26 prosecution runs afoul of the Tenth Amendment.

1 The Ninth Circuit has considered and rejected similar arguments
2 on a number of occasions. The circuit court's decision in Raich v.
3 Gonzales, supra, is a useful place to begin. In that case, a 4 seriously ill woman whose symptoms were ameliorated by the use of 5 marijuana brought an action seeking, in effect, to enjoin federal law 6 enforcement agencies from enforcing the CSA against her. 500 F.3d at 7 855-56. She sought relief upon several grounds. Among other things, 8 she argued, "Congress impermissibly exercised a police power [through 9 the CSA] that is reserved to the State of California under the Tenth 10 Amendment." 500 F.3d at 856. On appeal, she conceded her Tenth 11 Amendment claim was largely foreclosed by recent decisions of the 12 Supreme Court. She also conceded her case did not implicate the 13 "commandeering" line of cases. 500 F.3d at 867. The Ninth Circuit
14 accepted her concessions. In a lengthy footnote, the circuit court
15 explained:

16 The commandeering cases involve attempts by Congress to 17 direct states to perform certain functions, command state 18 officers to administer federal regulatory programs, or to 19 compel states to adopt specific legislation. . . . The 20 Controlled Substances Act, by contrast, "does not require 21 the [state legislature] to enact any laws or regulations, 22 and it does not require state officials to assist in the enforcement of federal statutes regulating private individuals."

23 500 F.3d at 867 n.17 (quoting Reno v. Condon, 528 U.S. 141, 151, 120 24 S.Ct. 666, 145 L.Ed.2d 587 (2000)) (other citations omitted).

25 Advocates of medical marijuana have continued to present Tenth
26 Amendment claims to the Ninth Circuit. In two unpublished decisions

1 in the past 12 months, the Ninth Circuit has rejected Tenth Amendment
2 challenges to the federal regulation of marijuana. United States v.
3 Sandusky, No. 13-50025, 2014 WL 1004075, at *1 (9th Cir. March 17, 4 2014); Montana Caregivers Association, LLC, v. United States, No. 12-5 35110, 2013 WL 1987385 (9th Cir. May 7, 2013). Both panels cited
6 Raich v. Gonzales, 500 F.3d 850 (9th Cir. 2007). Both panels regarded 7 themselves as bound by Raich. Both panels ruled the appellants' Tenth 8 Amendment claims were foreclosed by Raich. In view of Raich and the 9 authorities cited therein, this Court clearly lacks authority to 10 dismiss the instant prosecution under the Tenth Amendment.

11 IT IS HEREBY ORDERED:

12 1. Defendant Jason Zucker's "Motion to Dismiss Indictment as 13 Barred by the Tenth Amendment" (ECF No. 204) is denied.

14 2. "[Defendant Michelle Gregg's] Motion . . . to . . . Dismiss 15 Indictment" (ECF No. 213) is denied to the extent she seeks relief
16 under the Tenth Amendment.

17 3. Rolland Mr. Gregg's motion to dismiss the indictment (ECF No.
18 215) is denied.

19 IT IS SO ORDERED. The District Court Executive is hereby 20 directed to enter this order and furnish copies to counsel.

21 DATED this 30th day of April, 2014.
